TESTIMONIAL.

University of the State Missouri, Columbia, Mo., June 24, 1894

As a representative of the University of the state of Missouri, I visited the Mayfield-Smith Academy at Marble Hill, for the purpose of examining it with a view to receiving its graduates in the University without examination.

I found the school in charge of Prof. E. R. Graham, and as a result of the examination I gave the school my hearty endorsement, and it now stands upon our list of articulated schools.

Of Prof. Graham and his work I can speak in emphatic terms. He is a LIVING teacher, inspiring students to their best efforts and to high and to high ideals. The spirit pervading the school impressed me as being in a marked degree characterized by a manliness and earnestness which lead not only to good scholarship, but also to strength of character.

I believe Professor Graham is especially gifted as a teacher, and congratulate the community that is so fortunate as to secure his services.

Frederick C. Hicks, Professor of History and Economics,
